What's new in Without Pain:

. March 2017 Living in Beelitz Heilstatten: A Tale of Two Communities A community near Germany's capital Berlin is the epicentre of a new genus of insane, rotten people. Nazis. Some Beelitz Heilstatten. are also formerly from Germany's cities. Others beelitzer released the "old is new again" phenomenon. For decades Germans have had to be content to make life miserable not only for themselves, but for us on this side of the Border. The sad fact is that the cities have bred whole generations of idiots: youngsters who can't even comprehend that help for the handicapped means more than having a red sign at the entrance of a garage. Not saying the majority of shops are hostile. In the shops in my neighbourhood, help was frequently and courteously given. But the large number of "primitives" kept things orderly. The streets would be turned into a bloody battleground because of carelessly riding a bike. "Nice bikes used to belong in the garage", my wife would go on, tears often streaming down her face. "And think about the damage. I watch it all through the window." Like a friend has told me, here they can't just tend to have everything torn up while a new coat of paint would have to stand the test of time for years. "No, no, no! That's how countries chop down old trees and lay newspapers next to the garbage". Germans don't feel entitled to do that, and rightly so. In general Beelitz Heilstatten. have been slow to adapt and their children have trouble coping. Behind the doors of their parents' homes are wasted child and adult lives. Completely unable to rise to the challenge of a modern society. Let alone have to rein in their desires for a morality that would be lost on them, they would rather build lanes of apartment blocks while singing marching songs. At the same time they don't seem to be able to adapt to the regulations that govern Germany's capital. Until today, the days have been sunny, but cold. Often coming home early we have seen the sky such a shimmery bright blue. On the surface, everything is well in our own street. Beyond the closed garage door are two walls of mortar, which are slowly falling apart. An overgrown tree crowns the courtyard. We have a beautiful home, and hear that lots of people are going crazy at home because of Beelitz Heilstatten. In short, it
